

- Hur kan det byggda kulturarvets värden beskrivas?

ICOMOS TheoPhilos konferens i Florens 5-7 mars 2015

Vartannat år håller ICOMOS internationella vetenskapliga kommitté för Teori och filosofi inom konservering och restaurering (TheoPhilos) en konferens i Florens. Vissa av de mellanliggande åren hålls också en konferens på annan ort. Temat för den 13:e konferensen som hölls i Florens 5-7 mars 2015 var "How to Assess Built Heritage? Assumptions, Methodologies, Examples of Heritage Assessment Systems".

Vad ska saker heta?

Som både kommitténs namn och konferensens titel antyder så är definitioner och val av begrepp viktiga i den här kommittén. Redan när konferensen började diskuteras var det intensiva diskussioner om rubriken. Det blir väldigt tydligt hur språkbruk och innebörd i olika begrepp skiljer sig åt mellan olika länder och mellan olika yrkesgrupper. Denna begreppsförvirring speglade också själva konferensen då det var tydligt att olika deltagare hade olika uppfattning om vad konferensen skulle handla om.

Inte heller på svenska är det helt enkelt att hitta en definition. Men jag tycker att en översättning av konferenstiteln kan vara: Hur kan det byggda kulturarvets värden beskrivas? – Antaganden, metoder och exempel på system för att beskriva kulturhistoriska värden.

Problemformuleringen

Syftet med konferensen var att visa på metoder att beskriva det byggda kulturarvets värden så att det kan bevaras på bästa sätt. Man menade att alltför många kulturobjekt (eller som man uttrycker det ”monument”) i dag moderniseras eller anpassas till dagens krav och därmed förstörs.

Konferensen

Konferensen erbjöd 20 korta presentationer – med mycket stor variation. De spände från metoder för att låta allmänheten vara med och definiera sin närmiljös kulturvärden, över mer traditionella inventeringsmetoder, till hur man med hjälp av olika konstnärliga installationer kan uppmärksamma bortglömda kulturobjekt. Till skillnad från hur det (som jag uppfattar det) brukar vara på TheoPhilos konferenser så hade man denna gång bjudit in föredragshållare med mycket varierad bakgrund (i stället för medlemmar knutna till TheoPhilos). Det gav en intressant spridning och givande diskussioner. Men det innebar också att en del presentationer höll en relativt låg nivå.

De i mitt tycke intressantaste presentationerna var:

- Mieke van Bers, antikvarie från Nederländerna som presenterade den Nederländska kulturarvsmyndigheten arbete med riktlinjer för urval och bevarande. Nederländerna verkar arbeta på liknande sätt som i Sverige och vi bör kunna lära mycket av varandra. Mer info finns på:
www.culturalheritageagency.nl/en
- Jeremy Wells, professor i "Historic Preservation" vid Roger Williams University, USA som diskuterade hur man kan engagera allmänheten för att definiera närmiljöns kulturvärden. www.rwu.edu/academics/schools-colleges/saahp/faculty/jeremy-wells
- Rugile Balkaitė som arbetar för UNESCO i Litauen och berättade om ett rätt traditionellt, men intressant inventeringsprojekt av mellankrigstidsarkitektur i Kaunas i Litauen.

Konferenspublikation

På grund av den stora variationen i kvalitet mellan de olika presentationerna beslutade konferensledningen att i stället för en konferenspublikation med papers från alla presentationer så skulle även andra bjudas in att skriva artiklar. Denna publikation är planerad till hösten 2015 (och läggs om möjligt upp på ICOMOS Sveriges hemsida då)..

(Uppdatering 2015-12-13: Konferenspublikationen är försenad och kommer först under 2016.)

Konferensrapport av Staffan Hansing som deltog i konferensen med stöd av ICOMOS Sverige.

Avslutande middag med en stor del av konferensdeltagarna.

Bifogas det preliminära programmet för konferensen.

"HOW TO ASSESS BUILT HERITAGE? ASSUMPTIONS,
METHODOLOGIES, EXAMPLES OF HERITAGE ASSESSMENT SYSTEMS"

The contemporary conservation theory attempts to describe the complexity of heritage and its functions, regarding the factors, which determine the forms of its protection. It is, however, not a simple task, because apparently the current theoretical tools are not effective enough in practice today. The major problem is that more and more monuments are modernized, adapted and transformed in order to meet the needs and standards expected from society today. The theory of conservation should, therefore, clarify and clearly outline the rules and limits of intervention pertaining to the historical design and substance. The pre-requisite at the outset must be a comprehensive analysis.

The inventory of the material elements is a relatively simple task, for which standards and procedures have been developed. However, the analysis of heritage values is far more complex. This complexity results from the uniqueness and functions as well as regional aspects. As a consequence, generally accepted methodologies of cultural heritage assessment need to be differentiated depending on the specific cultural context. The challenge to combine the generally accepted theoretical orientations formulated in a number of basic papers (charters, principles, etc.) with the special regional and case specific needs.
